Biographical/Historical Sketch

Artist and political cartoonist John "Jack" Gill Knox, Jr. (1910-1985) was born to John Gill and Sarah Sperry Knox. A native of Nashville, Tennessee, Jack Knox achieved a distinguished career with The Nashville Banner (1946-1972) and became famous as an artist and political cartoonist of national recognition. His cartoons were syndicated and widely reprinted across the United States. During his more than forty-year career as a newspaper editorial cartoonist, he was honored with several prestigious awards and attracted attention from the Roosevelt, Truman, Eisenhower, Johnson, Kennedy, and Nixon administrations, all of them requesting his original drawings. Knox was widely known for his conservative political satire and caricatures, in addition to his original art and writings about Middle Tennessee rural life and life on the grand rivers.

Knox was raised in Texas, where his father explored oil resources as an independent oil operator. Circa 1924, the Knox family moved back to Nashville and Jack Knox, as a teenager, attended the Peabody Demonstration School for a couple of years, then enrollment at the Gulfport Military Academy in Gulfport, Mississippi, followed by graduation at Castle Heights Military Academy in Lebanon, Tennessee.

In 1932, Knox received his first cartoonist job when he was the illustrator of "Everybody's Political Primer," a cartoon booklet of pro-Roosevelt campaign literature that was created for the Democratic National Committee during the presidential campaign, helping to place Franklin Delano Roosevelt in the White House. Prior to joining The Banner in 1946, a conservative newspaper owned by the James G. Stahlman family of Nashville, Knox was a cartoonist for The Tennessean, ca. 1933-34, followed by eleven years as cartoonist for the Memphis Commercial Appeal from 1934-1945. Knox briefly left the newspaper field to work on a ranch in Texas for about a year, where he developed a love for horses. Circa 1930, Knox married Edith Towler, whom he fondly nicknamed "sweet Miss Speedy." The couple raised four children: John, Phoebe, Joseph, and Britt. Knox never went to art school and was self-taught with the help of a correspondence course that his wife had encouraged him to take. Knox's cartoons were conservative, attacking what he called the "give-away society." A favorite target of satire for the editorial cartoonist was Tennessee Senator Estes Kefauver. Not all cartoons were political--Knox also sketched cartoons supporting the National Safety Council, Alcoholics Anonymous, and the Clinic Bowl charity game. Knox authored and illustrated original book monographs: "Riverman," (1971); "Childhood the Second," (1972), a book that won the Distinguished Recognition Award from the Friends of American Writers; and "America's Tennessee Walking Horse," published in 1973. Jack Knox was recognized in successive editions of "Who's Who in America" and was a member of the Association of American Editorial Cartoonists.

Joseph Knox, the son of the cartoonist, donated the collection to the Nashville Public Library in August, 2004. The Nashville Public Library Foundation and the family of Jack Knox dedicated the Jack Knox Writer's Room on March 31, 2005 in the Special Collection Division. An exhibit of selections from the Jack Knox Collection and collection of Joseph "Joe" Knox titled "Caricature & the Comic Genius," was exhibited at the Nashville Public Library during Oct. 21, 2005 through Jan. 15, 2006.

Scope and Contents of the Collection

The collection, spanning ca. 1932-ca. 1990 (bulk ca. 1952-ca. 1972), consists of topical subject files and photographs collected by Jack Knox, the editorial cartoonist of the Nashville Banner from the mid-1940s to the early 1970s. Present in the collection are several editorial cartoons and caricatures of national and international politicians and statesmen, as well as original sketches that were probably drawn by Jack Knox. Several published magazine illustrations and articles are included in the subject files, covering popular culture themes such as cowboys, wild and domesticated animals, nature scenes, and 20th-century political figures. Includes more than 400 black and white photographs of primarily U.S. politicians, with several depicting ranch scenes, rodeos, and cowboys. Includes documentary sources about the dedication of the Lyndon Baines Johnson Library and School of Public Affairs on May 22, 1971, related to the Nashville Banner assignment when Jack Knox, editorial cartoonist, and Johnny Morgan, chief color photographer, were sent to Texas for the event.

Detailed Description of the Collection

Series I. Artist Reference Files, ca. 1932-ca. 1990 (bulk ca. 1952-ca. 1972),

Series Abstract/Description

This series consists of two subsets: topical subject files and photographs. These materials are research files that were collected and utilized by Jack Knox, the editorial cartoonist of the Nashville Banner from the mid-1940s to the early 1970s. Present in the collection are several original unsigned sketches of various 20th-century political figures, presumably by Jack Knox. The more than 400 black and white photographs depict U.S. politicians, entertainers, as well as views of ranch scenes, rodeos, and cowboys. Most of the photographs are Associated Press Wirephotos, though many of the prints were photographed by Nashville Banner photographers.

Arrangement

Each subseries is arranged alphabetically. The labeling of the cartoonist has been maintained on the files, with the exception of adding first names to the cited surnames. The primary content of alphabetical folders is indicated, though additional subjects may be included. Note: several of the photographic prints are damaged and have crease folds, others are cropped photographs.
